FMC UPDATE: GALLERIES, EXHIBITIONS & SALES

The San Francisco Craft and Folk Art Museum presents two exhibitions this month. "88 Jewels" is a survey of contemporary American jewelry offering a variety of approaches to personal adornment, giving dramatic evidence of the creative and technical excellence and wide range of materials used by today's leading jewelry makers. Six outstanding artists were invited to take part in the show: Melanie De Luca and Sandra Enterline of San Francisco; William Harper of Tallahassee, Florida; Richard Lambert of Stinson Beach; Ken Loeber of Algoma, Wisconsin; and Didi Suydam of Providence, Rhode Island. Other participating artists and designers were chosen through a national competition juried by Virginia Breier, V. Breier Contemporary and Traditional Crafts, San Francisco; Carol Caswell, Saks Fifth Avenue, San Francisco; and Susan Cummins, Susan Cummins Gallery, Mill Valley. A concern of the jurors, and a prime characteristic of the jewelry chosen, is the wearability of the pieces. The works reflect the range of modern sensibilities, from cool and practical to vibrant and extravagant. The show is co-sponsored by Saks Fifth Avenue. Jewelry by these artists will be for sale at Saks Fifth Avenue, San Francisco, during the exhibition, which runs from November 5 through December 23.

"Clay and Skin Pots" by Allen Moe are also on display at the Folk Art Museum during November and December. His work was included in the Museum's November 1987 "Innerskins/Outerskins" exhibition. Moe was born in Yosemite Valley and spent the first twenty years of his life there. This dramatic setting no doubt strongly influenced the sense of reverence for the earth reflected in his pieces. Since he moves about continually between Alaska and California, often out of reach of any modern conveniences, his work must conform to his lifestyle. He handbuilds his pots using the coil method, and fires them in a 55-gallon open-ended drum with a smaller drum inside. Living in the Alaskan bush has taught Moe to improvise - he uses in his works only those skins and animal remains that he finds. Moe explains: "For this body of work I have isolated myself on an island in British Columbia trying to maintain the grace to accept what comes to me - tiny crabs washed ashore by the tide, ling cod teeth dropped by eagles feeding their young, heron bones in the woods. These things come by their own accord. They cannot be hurried; you cannot have expectations, although it is difficult to maintain the trust. The process then becomes one of celebrating this beauty through isolation."

Also during November and December, the Museum will expand the space within the gallery devoted to their gift shop; there will be a Bead Swap on Saturday, November 19, from 9am to noon, for bead collectors to swap, sell, or share; and on Monday, November 21, the Museum co-sponsors, with The Japan Society of Northern California, a workshop on "The Art of Japanese Gift Wrapping" - see daily listings for details. The Museum, located in Landmark Building A, is open Tuesday through Sunday, 11am to 5pm, $1 admission (free admission on Saturday, 10am to noon). For more information on the Craft and Folk Art Museum, their exhibitions, special events, and membership, call 775-0990.

The Mexican Museum, in Landmark Building D, also has two exhibitions this month. "Colonial and Popular Religious Art of Mexico" displays more than 150 objects from the Museum's permanent collection, including religious and ornamental artworks. There will be santos, three-dimensional statuary; retablos, two-dimensional religious paintings on tin and canvas; ex-votos, two-dimensional miracle paintings on tin; and decorative artifacts and furniture. The exhibition features several typical altar installations contrasting urban and rural shrine motifs, and runs through January 22, 1989.

Opening October 25 and continuing through November 27 is an exhibition of "The Artifacts of El Dia de los Muertos," the ritual objects, toys, and artifacts that accompany the festival of the Day of the Dead. This contemporary Mexican celebration honoring the dead is the result of the merging of ancient Indian beliefs, practices and imagery with the Catholic rituals of All Saints' Day and All Souls' Day, November 1 and 2. The belief is that during this time, the dead return to earth to visit family and friends, and the living welcome their arrival with much drama and ceremony. Images fashioned by Mexican artisans from clay, tin, wood, paper and bread dough will be the focus of the exhibition.

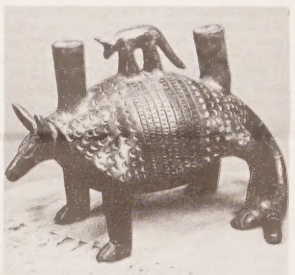
"La Tienda," the Museum's gift shop, presents a benefit sale from November 5 through 27. Colorful and exciting pieces of Mexican and Latin American folk art will be available daily from noon to 6pm. The selection of pieces is of the highest quality, and includes village pottery, Indian weavings, masks, papier maché sculpture, carved wooden figures, Huichol Indian yarn paintings, glassware, silver jewelry, toys, and pre-Hispanic reproductions. All the well-known Mexican pottery styles, from the brightly burnished blackware of Oaxaca to the deep sea-green works of Patamban, will be represented. The sale is sponsored by the Museum's Auxiliary, and all proceeds will go to Museum programming. Admission to the sale is free. Museum hours are Wednesday through Sunday, from noon to 5pm; admission is $3, $2 seniors. On the first Wednesday of each month, admission is free, and the Museum remains open until 8pm. For information about The Mexican Museum and its programs, call 441-0404 or 441-0445.

The Metal Arts Guild, a nonprofit association of nearly 200 Bay Area artists, sponsors a Metalsmiths' Fair in Fort Mason's Conference Center, Landmark Building A, on November 5 and 6. The show, held in celebration of the Guild's 35th year, features the works of more than 40 artists. Metal sculpture and jewelry made from silver, gold and space age metals is on display. Among the artists selected to show are several who participated in the recent Pacific States Craft Fair at Fort Mason; many others have works on display in galleries across the country. Jurors for the Fair included Walter Soellner, a Los Gatos gallery owner, metalsmith teacher and silversmith; Dawn Nakanishi, a metalsmith and teacher at San Francisco City College and Richmond Arts Center; and Elaine Potter, director of the Elaine Potter Gallery, San Francisco. Show hours are from 10am to 6pm on Saturday, and from 10am to 5pm on Sunday. Donations of $2.50 for adults and $2 for seniors are requested at the door; children under 12 are admitted free. For information, call 863-2438 or 881-0436.

Folk Art International returns to the Conference Center in Landmark Building A for the ninth year, with a selection of folk art and crafts from around the world, opening November 19 and running through December 28.

In other exhibitions at Fort Mason this month, a wide range of works can be seen: a tenth-anniversary group show at the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art Rental Gallery; a fine crafts show, followed by an all-faculty show, both from the Fort Mason Art Center, at the Coffee Gallery in the lobby of Landmark Building B; a sculpture exhibition in the Museo ItaloAmericano; and a one-man show presented by the Perception Gallery in the Fort Mason Office lobby, Landmark Building A. For details, see the listings inside under "Galleries." The African American Historical & Cultural Society, Landmark Building C, has a continuing display of items from their permanent collection, a gift shop, and periodic special exhibitions. For information about their hours, programs, and displays, call 441-0640.

Museums and galleries will be closed on Thanksgiving Day, November 24.



A variety of crafts are available at the Mexican Museum's Latin American Folk Art Sale
